To access scholarly databases (like Ebscohost and Proquest), start at the college website (lasc.edu).

Then, select A-Z list of Library Databases:

There are a lot of good databases, but this is the one I recommend.
Finally, you’ll need to sign-in (if you’re off-campus; if you’re on-campus, you can skip this step).

Here’s what the database will look like:
Now, before you search, check these boxes to make sure your results are usable:

Then, you can type in search terms to start finding sources:
After you click on a source, you’ll see this page:

Click here to open the full article; when you’re ready to cite it, click here to get it in the right format (make sure you’re using the MLA style option).
